THE WEEKLY POLLAR STAR.

TUESDAY ...... December 15, 1860.

Spirit of the Morning Press. The Intelligencer thinks it must pass the com prehension of ordinary minds to discern the importance attached by the Constitution to the alleged identity of opinion on the part of both Mr. Cass and the President with respect to "the great question of coercing a State to remain in the Union by military force." Who, in the wide land, has talked of "goercing a State?" inquires the Intelligencer.

The Intelligencer argues that too much tolerance has been granted by the administration to such among its members and subordinates as are avowedly and estensibly laboring for the destruction of the Government, and in this connection notes that the Government paper affords Mr. Cobb's disunion counsel space, even after he had withdrawn from the Cabinet, to the extent of "six dreary columns."

The Constitution has a fling at the Intelligences in consequence of some complimentary things said of the latter journal by the N. Y. Tribune and Evening Post.

YESTERDAY, IN THE COMMITTEE ROOM .- Washington city is agog with exciting rumors concerning what yesterday transpired in the room of the Committee of Thirty-three. This excitement grew out of the withdrawal of Mr. Reuben Davis, of Mississippi, (from the committee) on the ground that the tendency of matters among them looked rather to exacting further concessions from the South, than to the accord by the North of the additional constitutional guarantees now so evidently necessary to save the Government from destruction. Mr. Davis came to his conclusion in far too great haste. That decision resulted from a vote of the committee; not adopting the pending resolutions of Mr. Davis of Maryland, as is erroneously believed by many, but, simply, first to consider the subject of those resolutionsthe question of the remedies necessary to cure the violations of the fugitive slave law. On the question of giving that subject priority in their deliberations, we believe the vote to have stood ayes 16, noes 13; Mr. Winter Davis alone of the South voting aye. The South desires to have the territorial question first disposed of, only because it is really the single question concerning which it is possible that an agreement may be a work of difficulty; and also because its settlement is absolutely required to check the movement of the extreme South for the destruction of the Government. We regret, therefore, that the North (in the committee) saw fit to gratify Mr. Davis, of Maryland, in his wish first to dispose of the fugitive slave law subject, for the pacification of which he (Mr. D.) has a proposition pending before them.

Concerning that proposition, by the by, we have to say that we apprehend an erroneous impression prevails in the minds of most of the southern members, who evidently regard it as proposing further concessions from the South. On the contrary, as we have heard of its substance, it rather proposes that the South shall consent to modification of the existing fugitive slave law, which, while they will not in any particular weaken its operative effect, will insure its prompt execution everywhere, by stripping its opponents of the pretense that it is possible to reduce free persons of color to slavery through it. No southern man desires that the law shall afford the means of doing any such thing; nor do we believe that it has ever been so prostituted. Nevertheless ninetenths of those who oppose its execution, do so under that plea. Were they stripped of it by Congressional legislation, we doubt not that ninetenths of the trouble that exists through the law's non-execution, would vanish; and we trust that in whatsoever the committee may eventually report in the premises, they will take care that herenfter no such pretense of unfairness in the law shall remain to those who seek a plea to palliate its non-fulfillment. The addition to the law of a simple provision requiring the owner of an escaping slave to put on record in the office of his county's clerk, within ten days after the escape, a description of the runaway, and to produce a certified copy thereof when claiming him in a non-slaveholding State, will accomplish the object in a trice.

SECRETARY THOMPSON .- The announcement that this gentleman has left his post here on at mission from his State-Mississippi-to North Carolina, has already given rise to very varied comments in political circles, not a few of which involve invidious reflections upon him. We feel assured they are not deserved. That is to say, that he has not gone to North Carolina to endeavor to persuade that State to aid in destroying the Government which he has sworn to uphold, and whose officer, bound by that oath of office, he still is, but rather to induce her to take the only course by which the Government's integrity may be virtually restored and upheld. To insist that the Gulf States shall not assume the right to carve out for the whole South what its future shall be. Our information from the best sources satisfies us that he is for the general and united southern action by which alone southern rights may be secured in the Union; or if that be found Impossible, by which the South may peaceably become a respectable power without the destruc tion of American popular rights and of the con dition of society and property as they exist at this time, everywhere in the present Union.

1 Lord Lyons, in a letter to General Cass, speaks of the high esteem and regard which her Majesty and all classes of her subjects entertain for the American people. Since the Prince of Wales, in his visit, met with such a cordial reception by the President himself and by all classes of the citizens, and her Majesty trusts that these feelings of confidence and affection will long continue between the two countries, to their mutual advantage, and to the general interests of civilization and humanity.

Mr. Trescott, Assistant Secretary of State, replied that he was instructed by the President to express the gratification with which he has learned how correctly her Majesty has appreciated the spirit n which his Royal Highness was received broughout the Republic.

The President trusts that this manifestation o interest towards the royalty which he so well represents, will insure a mutual binding together of the common interest and mutual regard which have existed in the past, the feelings and the fortunes of the two nations which represent the enterprise, the civilization, and the constitutional liberty of the same race, more strongly than compacts and treaties.

MR. CRITTENDEN.-The speech being delivered by Mr. Crittenden as we go to press to-day, will happily exert a wide spread influence throughout the land; for it has, indeed, the ring of Clay in its every sentiment, so forcibly as that all might easily conceive it to be an emenation from the dead, rather than the living, ora

CHARGED WITH THE LARCENY OF GAS —A Mr.

J. D. Ingersoil, of Boston, is on trial before the Superior Court of that city, charged with the larceny of one hundred thousand feet of coal gas from the Boston Gas Light Company. It was claimed that the felonious use of gas covered a year, during which he paid about 87 to the Company for Gas. It was shown that he has a gas-cooking apparatus which he used extensively during the time, and once let a tenant use, charging him $2 per month for his proportion of the gas burned.

Items Telegraphed from Washington. WASHINGTON, Dec. 15 .- The President has ordered the Macedonian and another man of-war to be in readiness to sail at short notice, ostensi-bly for foreign stations, but really for Charleston harbor. Gen. Cass thought that they should be sent to sea at once, with sealed orders, and when "off soundings," their commanders should learn from those orders that they were to go to the re-lief of those really "invested" in Fort Moultrie.— Cor. of N. Y. Commercial.

The members of the New York delegation met on Sunday night at John Cochrane's room to consult upon future action, without regard to politics or party lines. They met at 8 o'clock, and sat till 11 o'clock. Hoard was Chairman, and John Cochrane was Secretary. Twenty-eight were present Beal and Carter were sick, and necessarily absent. The other six were also necessarily absent. Mr. Reynolds introduced a resolution drawn by himself, affirming, after a preamble stating the basis of the present Union and Con-stitution, that the Union must and shall be preserved; pledging New York to the suppot of it. served; piedging New York to the support of it. Slavery extension, and the right of secession and coercion, are ignored altogether. The language is very conciliatory, but calm and decided. The proposition met with general support, except on the part of Mr. Sickles, who introduced an amount of the proposition of the support of the part of th amendment proposing a meeting and consultation between the New York and Virginia delegations upon the crisis of affairs, for the purpose of secur-ing a union of action between those two great States. He supported his proposition in a strong speech. Reynoids also supported his resolution in a speech. Sickles's proposition met with no general favor, and was not adopted. Reynoids's was adopted by almost unanimous consent-only Sickles, Barr and Macklay opposing it strongly.
Briggs, Cochrane, Haskin, Clarke, and all the Republicans supported it. Sedgewick took very strong Republican grounds, and Clarke went in unequivocally for the support of the Union at all events. They adjourned to Wednesday evening.

CONGRESSIONAL. THIRTY-SEXTH CONGRESS-SECOND SESSION

THIRTY-SIXTH CONGRESS—SECOND SESSION.

SENATE.—After we went to press yesterday—
Mr. Wade, of Ohio, addressed the S-nate upon the condition of the country. He he'd that the gentlemen who are complaining had the Government in their keeping, and have been the dominant party, and the gentlemen who are foremost with these complaints have been the leaders of that party; therefore if there is anything wrong (Mr. W. addressed the other side of the chamber) it is you and not we that are responsible, for we have never had the legislation of the country we have never had the legislation of the country for an hour. You have no specific charges against us, but it has been said the North has been unfaithful to the fugitive slave law. That law in some of its provisions is very odious to us, and to all who are of the Anglo-Saxon race. In respect to the personal liberty bills there are only two or three of them, and practically they are null and void. The Senators from Georgia, Virginia and Mississippi wese so frank and candid as to give them up as causes for the excitement at the South. Even the gentleman from Georgia had said Lin-coln would do no harm.

Mr. Iverson had not said any such thing.
Mr. Wade read from Mr. Iverson's speech and continued. Then you did say that Lincoln would commit no "overt act," and by consequence you are acting on suspicion. You will not wait to see what Mr. Lincoln will do, which means this, "either we will rule or ruin this Government." That is what it means. That is what it means.

Mr. Wade took it that secession was no right under the Constitution, whilst he admitted the general right of revolution. Those who under-take revolution, if successful, are all right, and are heroes; if defeated they are rebels. Mr. W. did not say this because he supposed any party in-tended to make war on a seceding State, but merely to show that we have the right. Though we will not make war on a State, she cannot go out till she gets the consent of the Union itself. The Chief Magistrate of the Union cannot be released from his duty to prevent any star from dropping from the galaxy of this Confederacy. The most important duty is the collection of the revenue. If the people of South Carolina do not want the mails; if they will not send Senators and Representatives here, we cannot force them in these matters, but when they come to the performances of the duty due to all the States that duty must be performed. The President must collect the revenue. When blockaded, South Carolina will be put into such position that it will compel her to declare war, and win her independence by violence and blood. This act of leveling war it treasure against the United States. levying war is treason against the United States, and no lawyer in this body will deny it. If the Union of these States is to come to an end, he (Mr. W.) had looked around to see what policy we of the North may adopt. He could see a glorious future for those who stand by the Union. There stands Mexico, she is afraid of you on acceptable with the could be a stand of the could be union. count of your slavery propagandism and your fillibustering. They would invite us take the protectorate of their country. England has wished us to do this. He would say to the merchants of the North, if they would but follow him, to make seven-fold out of Mexico to what they now do from the South. Hitherto Mexico has been led by our seek the protection of strangers.

policy to fear and hate us, and has been driven to Mr Wade concluded his speech by alluding to the Republican policy of providing a home for the free blacks in Central America, and saw the day in the distance when Canada would be knocking to enter the door of our Union. We shall yet be the greatest nation of freemen that has ever lived on the face of the earth This policy had somewhat reconciled Mr. W. to the secession of the Southern States. He would prefer to keep the present Union, but if Southern men will have it so, the old flag shall fly over the divided people This capital, which some gentleman said should be the capital of the Southern Confederacy, was founded by Washington, and the flag of the Union shall still fly over it. Although that flag might be assailed by traiters on every hand, yet by the grace of God, under its shadow, as he had lived, so would be die. The Senate then proceeded to the consideration of Executive business, and, after some time spent therein, the doors were reopened and the Senate adjourned

House .- After our report closed-Mr. Sickles and John Cochrane presented resolutions on the state of the Union, which were referred to the Committee of Thirty-three. Mr. Adrain, of N. J., presented the following: Whereas the Constitution of the United States is the supreme law of the land, and its ready and faithful observance the duty of all good and lawabiding citizens-Resolved, That we deprecate the spirit of diso-bedience to the Constitution wherever manifested, and we earnestly recommend the repeal of all statutes enacted by State Legislatures which are in conflict with and in violation of that sacred instrument, and of the laws of Congress made in pursuance thereof. Mr. John Cochrane moved to have the resolution amended as follows: "And that the personal liberty bills of all States, wherever passed, should be repealed." Mr. Adrain objected. His resolution covered the personal liberty bills

Mr. Hindman moved to have the resolution modified by the introduction of the words "including personal liberty bills," so called. Several republican members -" No, no." Mr. Burnett contended that the resolution ought

Mr. Sherman proposed that if the resolution be modified it ought to be modified so as to run after the words personal liberty bill, "all nullification laws;" if it was not so amended he would move to lay the resolution on the table.

Mr Adrain hoped the feeling of all was a desire to preserve the Union, and the way to do that was to manifest a spirit of conciliation on all sides. If any objection was raised there to the first proposed amendment, that all personal liberty bills should be repealed, and all acts in conflict with the Constitution of the United States and the laws of Congress made in pursuance thereof, in his humble judgment the Union could not be After some debate the resolution was modified by the introduction after the words "repeal of all statutes," the words "including personal liberty bills so called. The yeas and nays were then taken on the passage of the resolution, and resulted—yeas 156, says (Messrs. Alley, Carey, Edwards, Eliot, Hutchins, Potter, E. R. Reynolds, Sedgwick, Spinner, Tappau, Vandever, Washburn of Maine, and Wells,) 14.

During the roll call some Southern member declined to vote on grounds similar to those declared by Messrs. Barksdale and Singleton, as Mr. Barksdale was opposed to all compremise, and, as the resolution bore that character, he declined to vote Mr. Singleton said that, inasmuch as he did not want to dictate to the Northern States what they should do with their personal liberty bills, he declined to vote.

Mr. Lovejoy introduced a resolution somewhat similar to that of Mr. Adrain, with the following addition, "and we earnestly recommend the repeal of all the statutes, including the nullification laws so called," &c.

An unimportant debate followed, when the yeas and mays were again taken, and the motion was carried—yeas 135, nays none.

Mr. Morris, of Ill., gained the floor and introduced Union resolutions, declaring the election of Lincoln or any other exciting cause insufficient to justify dissolution. Carried.

With the consent of the House, Mr. Crawford, of Ga., introduced the following resolution:

Resolved, That the Constitution of the United Resolved, That the Constitution of the United States recognizes property in slaves. That the Congress of the United States has passed laws to aid slaveholders in recapturing their slaves whenever they escape and make their way into the free States. That the Supreme Court of the United States have decided that negroes were not included either in the Declaration of Independence or in the Constitution of the United States except as alayer, and that they cannot become citizens. slaves; and that they cannot become citizens.
And we, the members of this House, hereby sustain and will support this construction of the Constitution, the laws, and such decision of the Supreme Court.

The resolution having been read—
Mr. Sherman, of Ohio, moved that, pending the gentleman's motion, the House adjourn.

Mr. Davis, of Miss., rose to a question of privilege. He then asked to be relieved from further service on the Committee of Thirty-three assignments. Supreme Court. ing as his reason for making the request that the majority of the committee, by their speeches and actions, had forced the Southern members of the committee to the necessity of making forther concessions to the North, which they on their part were not willing to yield. The North would yield nothing, and there was no further use for him on

The question being taken on the motion to excuse the gentleman, it was agreed to.

On motion of Mr. Briggs, of N. Y., the House, at 4 o'clock, adjourned, with the understanding that the resolution of Mr. Crawford would come up as the first business in order to-morrow.

TUESDAY, December 18. SENATE.—The Chair laid before the Senate the acts of the Territorial Legislature of Washington; which were referred to the Committee on Territories.

Several communications were received from the Departments, and laid on the table.

A number of memorials were presented and Mr. Lane, of Oregon, introduced a series of resolutions setting forth the differences which have occurred between the States, resulting in a determination on the part of the Southern States to dissolve the Union, and favoring the call of a National Convention to amend the Constitution, and opposing the use of force against a seceding

State.

The resolution was laid on the table.

Mr. Crittenden, in a patriotic speech, proposed the extension of the Missouri Compromise to the Pacific; the strengthening of laws prohibiting the African slave trade, and enforcing the fugitive slave law by the repeal of all nullifying statutes He spoke at some length in advocacy of conciliation and compromise. He declared if conciliation was refused, the North could not justly refuse to give them an equal share in the common territories of the Union. In view of the mighty consequences now pressing upon the country, was of the Missouri Compromise? Unless something like this was done, we would be a divided people in less than six months. Was not this compromise a cheap price to pay for the glorious centuries that were in store for this Republic if we remained united? He believed unless something was done, the disunion excitement would swallow up Kentucky.

House -The Speaker laid before the House the letter of Mr. Washburne. Governor elect of Maine, resigning his seat as a Representative from that State, to take effect on the 1st of January Mr. Stevens, of Washington Territory, intro-duced a resolution to enable the Secretary of the Interior to decide on the validity of the title of the Pugitt's Sound Agricultural Company.

Also, a resolution to station a war steamer Columbia river; referred. Mr. Otero introduced a resolution recognizing the cooperation of the volunteers and that of regular forces within the Territory of New Mexico.

and appropriating to pay them; referred.

Mr. Florence presented the proceedings of the late meeting in Independence Square, Philadelphia, in favor of the Union; referred.

Mr. Bocock asked to be excused from voting upon the Union resolution submitted by Mr. Morris, of Ill., and also moved to have the resolution laid upon the table.

After some informal discussion—
Mr. Crawford called up his resolution introduced yesterday. Mr. Sherman moved to lay the whole subject on the table, with a view to proceed to the reg-On this motion the year and mays were ordered which were being taken as our report closed.

all of which, however long standing or bad, he oures in a few minutes, without the slightest pain or inconvenience, either during their removal or afterwards.

Dr. SCHLOSSER'S great success among the first families in America, as well as among several of the imperial royal fami ies of Europe, has gained for him several thousand testimonials; of these he begs to append the following to his present announcement.

AMERICAN TESTIMONIALS. From Wm. Rice, Ex-Proprietor of the Pennsylva

Dr. Schlesser has extremely painful for many years toe, which were extremely painful for many years. The extraordinary ease with which he operates is remarkable; and I cheerfully recommend him to all who are troubled with corns as the only person I have ever known to perform the operation scientifically and without a particle of pain.

Philadelphia, Sept. 23, 1257. WM. RICE.

From Hon. Charles C. Van Zandt, R. I. Dr Schlosser has to day operated upon a very painful corn of mine with perfect success, relieving all pain and removing it without suffering CHAS. C. VAN ZANDT.

Providence, R. I., Oct. 28, 1839.

From J W. Gray, editor Plaindealer, Clevelant, O. Dr. Foblosser has extracted seven troublesome corns for me without pain and with every prospect of a permanent cure. I can cheerfully recommend him to the public patronage.

J. W. GRAY. From Dr. S. Verdi, M. D.

I certify that I have been very successfully operated upon by Dr. Schlosser without any pain.
Washington, Jan. 7, 1858. S. VERDI, M. D. From Professor D. Gilbert, Philadelphia.

Dr. Schlosser removed four corns for me without pain, and satisfactorily.

D. GILBERT, M. D. F. om Dr. S. M. Landis, Phila. City Water Cure Inst. Dr. Schlosser has extracted eight painful corns from my feet without the least pain, and the greatest satisfaction to myself. I would by all means recommend him to every body who is tormented with these evils.

S. M. LANDIS, M. D.

From Rev. Chas. W. Quick. The operations of Dr. Schlosser are unattended with pain, and remove the corns effectually. He removed several for me to my entire satisfaction. Pittsburg, May 27, 1858. CHAS. W. QUICK.

From W H. Tingley, M. D. Dr. Schlosser has removed several corns from my feet to my entire satisfaction.
